Integrity-Centered Leadership

About Doing the Right Thing!

One of the nation's leading training seminars on Personal Leadership that participants will find career enhancing, personally rewarding and professionally developing.

➤ COURSE DESCRIPTION

"Integrity-Centered Leadership" is an essential quality of building trust within an organization and the responsibility of all members to reflect that image by "doing the right thing, the right way and for the right reason." It has often been said that, "everything rises and falls upon leadership." Today's public safety and criminal justice agencies need strong leaders and many of them. To meet the demands placed upon these agencies, leadership should be fostered at all levels of the organization and all employees from the agency head and other managers down through the ranks to supervisors, trainers, officers, clerks and secretaries, should be encouraged to act as leaders.

The leadership challenge of developing excellence in yourself and others is built upon a well established truth, "You can not lead others until you can lead yourself." Much of the leadership training today is geared more toward ability and proficiency in one's profession. It often ignores the benefits of developing sound personal leadership principles in our personnel which serve as the foundation on which to build cohesiveness within an organization and enhance all other professional development. This course focuses on proven principles of personal leadership development. It offers a blueprint that will greatly impact and influence any new, current or future leader that true leadership excellence is doing the right thing, setting the right example, serving as a role model and making a difference in other people's lives.

"Integrity-Centered Leadership" is about sound human resource development that highlights the difference in an average organization or one that provides the "winning edge" in employee, staff and organizational development.
