Career enhancing training that puts the strength of your department in the character of your personnel and not in the weight of your policy manual. Participants will find this training to be one of the most personally rewarding and professionally developing courses available.

The Missouri POST Program has approved this course in the area of Interpersonal Perspectives 16 hours for "Approved Provider" training credit Post Control Number 1228111138.

COURSE DESCRIPTION

"Integrity-Centered Leadership" is an essential quality of building trust within an organization and the responsibility of all members to reflect that image by "doing the right thing, the right way and for the right reason." It has often been said that, "everything rises and falls upon leadership." Today's public safety and criminal justice agencies need strong leaders and many of them. To meet the demands placed upon these agencies, leadership should be fostered at all levels of the organization and all employees from the agency head and other managers down through the ranks to supervisors, trainers, officers, clerks and secretaries, should be encouraged to act as leaders.

The leadership challenge of developing excellence in yourself and others is built upon a well established truth, "You can not lead others until you can lead yourself." Much of the leadership training today is geared more toward ability and proficiency in one's profession. It often ignores the benefits of developing sound personal leadership principles in our personnel which serve as the foundation on which to build cohesiveness within an organization and enhance all other professional development. This course focuses on proven principles of personal leadership development. It offers a blueprint that will greatly impact and influence any new, current or future leader that true leadership excellence is doing the right thing, setting the right example, serving as a role model and making a difference in other people's lives.

"Integrity-Centered Leadership" is about sound human resource development that highlights the difference in an average organization or one that provides the "winning edge" in employee, staff and organizational development.

COURSE OBJECTIVE

Public safety and criminal justice professionals encounter, on a daily basis, a myriad of society's most difficult and demanding challenges. The sound leadership principles and skills taught in this training will provide new, current and future leaders at all levels with a foundation that will allow them to immediately transfer these principles and skills to real-life challenges that they will encounter in both their personal and professional lives.

Course Topics

- Personal leadership traits autocratic vs people-minded styles, people skills, building relationship, the power of a positive influence, personal responsibility and much more.
- Setting Priorities determining what is really important
- Integrity & Ethics the greatest leadership challenge
- Vision developing a blue print for the future
- Dealing with change the good, the challenge and how it can lead to growth
